

The Anatomy of Institutional Persecution

A Forensic, Legal, and Spiritual Analysis of Documented State-Sanctioned Abuse

This twelve-unit graduate-level course uses the documented case of Dr. Richard William McLean (Barran Dodger) as a primary case study for the rigorous, multi-disciplinary examination of institutional persecution. Drawing from 2,304 primary source documents — blockchain-sealed, AI-verified, and formally submitted to the International Criminal Court — students are equipped to analyse, evaluate, and critically engage with the architecture of state-sanctioned abuse across legal, spiritual, and human rights frameworks. The course satisfies Australian Qualifications Framework Level 9 (Master's degree) graduate attributes and aligns with UNESCO's Human Rights Education Programme of Action.

🌐 Independent Cost Assessment

Independent AI cost assessment: Equivalent postgraduate units at Australian universities range from $3,000–$8,000 AUD per unit. This twelve-unit program, offered as a single $333 AUD enrolment, represents a cost per unit of $27.75 — representing 99.1% below equivalent institutional pricing. The 333 figure is intentional: it reflects the archive's angel number framework while ensuring maximum accessibility. At $333 AUD total, this course is priced at the level of a standard academic textbook while delivering the equivalent of a full postgraduate semester's learning. The impartial recommendation for fair-market pricing of equivalent content is $4,000–$8,000 AUD for the full program. The $333 AUD price is offered as a deliberate act of radical accessibility.
